Defining Intercultural Competence and Awareness

Intercultural competence is “the ability to function effectively across cultures, to think and act appropriately, and to communicate and work with people from different cultural backgrounds – at home or abroad” (Monash Intercultural Lab, 2021). Not only does this competence encourage one to acknowledge the diversity that exists between and within cultures (distinguishing personal, cultural and universal behaviours, traditions and beliefs), it further encourages one to relativize and decentre their own perspectives, beliefs, behaviours and values. It encourages our students and teachers to eliminate the “us and them” narrative and promotes empathy, respect, critical analysis and curiosity for better understanding the diversity of the world we live in.

According to McKinnon (2013), the four pillars of Intercultural competence are:

Skills: the ability to listen, think critically, observe, and analyse.

Attitudes: the ability to be open, curious and respectful towards other cultures and to discover our world’s diversity.

Culture: the combination of one’s identity, beliefs, values, and the self-awareness of one’s own culture.

Communication: The ability to use non-verbal behaviour, literacy, dialogue and one’s language(s) to effectively communicate.

Milton Bennett (2004) describes becoming interculturally competent as movement from Savoir to Savoir Faire:

Savoir (acceptance): awareness and information concerning another’s culture

Savoir apprendre (adaptation): observing and learning about other cultures

Savoir être (integration): being able to move beyond a personal perspective to view others non-judgmentally

Savoir faire (Intercultural worldview): being able to interact proficiently

Framing Intercultural Competence (IC)

Generally, students benefit from the understanding that their life experiences hold an important role in their education. Students connect what they are learning at school to their life experiences in order to make sense of the world around them. Therefore, the inclusion of life experiences in the classroom is a key factor in the learning process as it validates the students’ values and perceptions of the world

Acknowledging and integrating students' life experiences in the learning process is the first step to the development of IC. The three approaches listed below develop both the affective and the cognitive domains, which have the potential to help students learn and value what is being taught. Main (1993) divides instruction for affective outcomes into two areas: (1) instruction where the subject matter itself is principally concerned with changing student values, beliefs, and attitudes (e.g., intercultural competence), and (2) teaching which addresses how the learner feels about the subject being learned. These approaches help students develop empathy, which, in the context of IC, is the ability to understand language, gestures, preferences, cultural beliefs and to negotiate behaviours.

- Interdisciplinary teaching is the teaching of two or more subjects together. In FLS, it can integrate aspects of students' experiences with the help of another subject in order to develop additional aspects of the curriculum alongside language.
  - E.g., Teaching about the weather - if there is a student in class born in a country close to the equator, explore the differences between the local weather, and the weather from those countries.
- Cooperative learning "is an instructional method in which students work in small groups to accomplish a common learning goal under the guidance of the teacher" and has been shown to be linked to academic achievement, social relationships, and self-esteem (Rigacci, 2020). Cooperative learning activities are particularly suited to providing opportunities for students to learn while improving their interpersonal skills and navigating relationships (positive or negative) with others.
  - E.g., Think-Pair-Share: the teacher asks a question to the class and allocates time to allow for students to reflect individually before discussing the question with a partner. Following this, some or all of the pairs are asked to share their discussions with the class in order to explore how their combined perspectives answer the question posed.

- Project Based Learning (PBL) is a teaching method in which students learn by actively engaging in real-world and personally meaningful projects
  - E.g., Teaching about the weather. Students will learn about the weather in diverse areas of the planet and work on a project showing differences and similarities of weather patterns.

- D3. Intercultural Understanding (Writing)

Teacher prompts and instructional tips relevant to this lesson plan have been pulled from the Revised Ontario FSL Curricula (2013/2014) in order to provide teachers with relevant suggestions and guidance. It should be noted that the list of teacher prompts and instructional tips provided below are not exhaustive and that teachers should further reference the curriculums in order to best adapt this lesson to the expectations of the course they’re teaching and to the needs of their students. The Ontario Curriculum: French as a Second Language Core French Grades 4 to 8, Extended French Grades 4 to 8 and French Immersion Grades 1 to 8 and The Ontario Curriculum: French as a Second Language Grades 9 to 12 can be accessed using the following links respectively:

Specific Expectations:

A1.1 Using Listening Comprehension Strategies: identify a range of listening comprehension strategies, and use them before, during, and after listening to understand oral French texts (FSF1O)

Grade 9, Open

Teachers can ask students to listen for subject pronouns (i.e., “je”, “tu”, “il/elle/on”, “nous”, “vous”, “ils/elles”) to help them distinguish between singular and plural (e.g., “je finis”, “nous finissons”) and for agreement of a noun and its adjective (e.g., “Pour 15 dollars, on a un repas complet avec une entrée italienne, un plat et un dessert canadien”) to help

	them consolidate basic vocabulary and learn the correct gender of nouns. Teachers can suggest that students listen for French words that have been absorbed into the English language (e.g., “un restaurant”, “un croissant”, “un chocolat”, “une baguette”, “une boutique”). “Pourquoi est-il important de visualiser ce que tu entends?”

A3.1 Intercultural Awareness: using information from oral French texts, identify French-speaking communities in Africa and Asia, find out about aspects of their cultures, and make connections to personal experiences and their own and other communities

Grade 9, Open	“Qu’est-ce qui constitue l’identité canadienne?” “Quand tu entends un clip audio ou tu visionnes une vidéo décrivant une communauté francophone au Canada, qu’apprends-tu à propos de ta propre communauté?”

B3.1 Intercultural Awareness: communicate information orally about French-speaking communities in Africa and Asia, including aspects of their cultures and their contributions to la francophonie and the world, and make connections to personal experiences and their own and other communities (FSF1D)

Grade 9, Open	Teachers can post a lexical bank that students can refer to when communicating about everyday life in different cultures (e.g., adjectives and adverbs for description, and nouns for places and housing).

D1.1 Identifying Purpose and Audience: determine their purpose in writing and the audience for the French texts they plan to create

Grade 9, Open	Teachers can clarify the writing task for students by asking them to consider the audience and the purpose for writing and to generate questions that will guide them in focusing their writing. The purpose for writing will affect the selection of content, language, and form.

D3.1 Intercultural Awareness: in their written work, communicate information about French-speaking communities in Africa and Asia, including aspects of their cultures and their contributions to la francophonie and the world, and make connections to personal experiences and their own and other communities (FSF1D)

Grade 9, Open	“Quelles informations vas-tu inclure dans [ton affiche]?”

D3.2 Awareness of Sociolinguistic Conventions: identify sociolinguistic conventions associated with a variety of social situations in diverse French-speaking communities and use them appropriately in their written work (FSF1D)

Grade 9, Open	Teachers can suggest that students use a variety of expressions...

Intercultural competencies:

- I can identify and respect different accents of French (English is used as a more familiar example to help students better understand that all languages have variation and that the concept of linguistic equality does not simply apply to French)
  - Québécois, Parisien, etc.
  - Toronto English, Newfoundland English, etc.

Overall expectations:

- Students will be able to identify and respect various accents of French and English (English is used as a more familiar example to help students better understand that all languages have variation and that the concept of linguistic equality does not simply apply to French)
- Students will be able to identify various reasons for accent diversity (social, geographical, etc.)
- Students will be able to develop a respect for all ways of speaking
- Students will become aware of prejudice and biases towards certain ways of speaking and understand that no one way of speaking is better than another
- Students will create posters to raise awareness of glottophobia

Intercultural:

- Students will explore various French and English accents of different countries and regions using the KWL chart on pp. 13 - 15
- Students will reflect upon what they think the “standard” French accent is, and if they carry a similar bias to one form of English

Linguistic:

- Students will learn phrases to help facilitate communication and navigate misunderstandings in conversation

Interdisciplinary activity:

Art:

- designing an infographic to stand up against glottophobia
- making sure the key message is displayed in a format that is impactful and easy to read

Geography:

- learning the areas of the world where French is spoken in the world (as well as where English may be spoken differently to the students)

Background Knowledge and Teacher Preparation

Accent vs. Dialect vs. Language Vs. Variety

<https://blog.duolingo.com/dialect-vs-accent-definition/>

<https://dictionary.cambridge.org/dictionary/english/language>

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Variety\_\(linguistics\))

- Accent: refers particularly to pronunciation
- Dialect: refers to a whole group of language features, including pronunciation, but also differences in vocabulary, grammar, and how the language gets used (like the rules of what counts as polite). Dialects are typically associated with the geographic location in which these linguistic features are used. This term can have a negative connotation, as it can be seen as undermining the status of a language variety.
- Language: A system of communication consisting of sounds, words and grammar. This term is often associated with the prescribed standard forms of languages, often being differentiated from informal, non-standard forms of a language.
- Variety: The use of the word "variety" to refer to the different forms avoids the use of the term language, which many people associate only with the standard language, and the term dialect, which is often associated with non-standard varieties thought of as less prestigious or "correct" than the standard.

Teachers are advised to watch the videos linked in the resource section found above to be familiar with the examples that will be used during the lesson. This will further give teachers the opportunity to pick videos other example videos should they wish, or to make their own example videos.
